MAJOR AREAS OF RESEARCH INTEREST

- Young adult cancer survivorship
- Psychological and behavioral adaptation to stress and disease
- Positive psychology and protective (i.e., stress resistant) factors of health and health behavior
- Health behavior interventions (e.g., substance use prevention, adherence, quality of life, safer sex)

GRANT SUPPORT - CURRENT:

1R01MD007801-01A1 (Milam)	07/03/2014 to 03/31/19
National Institute on Minority Health and Health Disparities (NIMHD) Reducing racial/ethnic inequities in childhood cancer survivorship To examine, using a population-based cohort of childhood cancer survivors throughout Los Angeles County, risk and protective factors of cancer related follow-up care among recently treated emerging adult Hispanic and non-Hispanic childhood cancer survivors. Hispanics are substantially underrepresented in cancer survivorship research and results from this study will provide guidance to identify and reduce health disparities observed between Hispanic and non-Hispanic survivors in health care utilization, late effects and unmet needs. Role: Principal Investigator $1,203,408	25%
1R01MD007801-01A1 (Milam)	Supplement
National Institute on Minority Health and Health Disparities (NIMHD) Research supplement to promote diversity in health-related research (minority supplement) Reducing racial/ethnic inequities in childhood cancer survivorship Role: Principal Investigator (Trainee: Cynthia Ramirez) $50,000
587485 (Milam) Tobacco-Related Disease Research Program (University of California) High Impact Research Project Award Health Behaviors among emerging adult survivors of childhood cancers This project examines substance use behaviors among young adult cancer survivors. (Haubrich) 4/1/12 to 3/31/17
California HIV/AIDS Research Program (CHRP) 5%
California Collaborative Treatment Group (CCTG)
ALERT-Active Linkage, Engagement and Retention to Reduce HIV
This project aims to determine if enhanced support interventions increase patient retention in HIV care as well as adherence to HIV pre-exposure prophylaxis
Role: Co-Investigator
$404,000 (site)

Norris Comprehensive Cancer Center Pilot Program (Spruijt-Metz) 9/15/16 to 11/30/17
Patient point-of-view: Understanding how Virtual mHealth Coaches can be utilized to improve the health of adolescent and young adult cancer survivors.
This project aims to collect pilot data using qualitative, user-centered and observational research techniques to support larger grant submissions.
Role: Co-Investigator
$40,000

Norris Comprehensive Cancer Center Pilot Program (Spruijt-Metz, Swartout, Freyer) 12/1/17 to 11/30/18
Examining engagement using Virtual mHealth Companions
This project aims to collect pilot data concerning the feasibility of using a virtual human to engage young adult cancer survivors.
Role: Co-Investigator
$60,000

USC CTSI (Milam) 07/01/2017–06/30/2018
Cancer related follow-up care and health care self-efficacy among adolescents and young adults: a longitudinal analysis 5%
Young cancer survivors face unique health challenges including late effects from their cancer treatments as well as adverse psychosocial outcomes. The goal of this study is to conduct a longitudinal analysis of the role of health care self-efficacy—the perceived confidence to navigate one's health care—among young adult cancer survivors ages 18-39 over a 7-year period. Results will examine whether health care self-efficacy is prospectively related to engagement in follow-up care.
Role: Principal Investigator
$40,000

USC CTSI (Milam, Freyer) 07/01/2017–06/30/2018
Team Building grant
The goal of this project is bring together investigators from different parts of the University in order to spur collaborations focused on cancer survivorship research among young adults.
Role: Co-Principal Investigator

Substance use among adolescent and young adult Hispanic cancer survivors
The extent of our knowledge regarding the health behaviors of recently treated childhood cancer survivors (CCS) is unclear because prior work has been largely based on patients who were diagnosed before 1990. Further, our understanding of health behaviors among Hispanic cancer survivors is especially limited due to underrepresentation of this ethnic group in research efforts. The purpose of this study is to examine the substance use behaviors (alcohol, marijuana, and tobacco) of recently treated Hispanic CCS to provide information on appropriate methods to improve these behaviors and ultimately, long term survival of CCS.

Genes, Environment and Tobacco Use Across Cultures
To investigate the efficacy of tobacco and alcohol use prevention programs, across cultures, within specific cultural contexts, and across individuals in the U.S. and China. Based on our previous findings, cultural context and individual disposition have potentially important moderator effects on prevention programs. We propose an extension of this research with three projects and four cores incorporating the disciplines of psychology, sociology, and behavioral genetics to examine the genetic and social-environmental risk and protective factors for adolescent tobacco and alcohol use among adolescents in California and China.
